by integrating conversations across disciplines especially focusing on classical studies and jewish and christian studies this volume addresses several imbalances in scholarship on reading and textual activity in the ancient mediterranean contributors intentionally place jewish christian roman greek and other reading circles back into their encompassing historical context avoiding subdivisions along modern subject lines divisions still bearing marks of cultural and ideological interests in their examination contributors avoid dwelling upon traditional methodological debates over orality vs literacy and social classifications of literacy instead turning their attention to the social historical groups of people circles and networks strata and class scribal culture material culture epigraphic and papyrological evidence functions and types of literacy and the social relationships that all of these entail overall the volume contributes to an emerging and important interdisciplinary collaboration between specialists in ancient literacy encouraging future discussion between two currently divided fields

use reader response strategies to achieve common core goals in reading and in writing response journals brief personal writing in response to reading can significantly improve reading comprehension what s more when scaffolded over the year reader response strategies promote engagement build understanding of complex literary and informational text and even help students provide supporting evidence in their writing all goals of the common core for educators eager to use reader response strategies veteran teacher lesley roessing presents a unique step by step approach that inspires thoughtful reading and skillful writing in grades 5-12 based on research and her own classroom experience. Innovative writing exercises encourage students to read more deeply, develop questions, and participate actively in class, beginning with simple response tasks and moving toward more complex assignments. The book provides a scaffolded curriculum for the full academic year, developed for language arts and content area teachers as well as literacy specialists. This resource includes examples of response journals for a wide range of genres, including fiction, nonfiction, poetry, and students' personal reading strategies for using reader response to guide classroom discussions, group work, book clubs, and journal writing at home. Adaptations for students with diverse abilities, numerous classroom-ready templates, and samples of student work discover a well-structured writing curriculum that promotes confident learning and the joy of reading.

Reading and writing are complementary processes that experienced readers and writers engage in recursively. Unfortunately, community colleges today are filled with developing readers and writers who require more guided practice and explicit strategies instruction to be successful in first-year composition. Reading provides students with concrete exemplars of how good writing is structured, idea generation when they lack background knowledge, and aids in generating complex and thoughtful text. That's why writing to read, reading to write, presents reading, writing, and critical thinking as engaging and complementary endeavors. This focus on reading also gives students who are underprepared for the first-year composition course or in the co-requisite support sections a chance to practice those skills and re-apply them as they develop college-level work.

This volume presents the results of a two-year research project which examined the development and use of reading and writing by school-aged children. The studies examined the relationships between children's reading and writing by looking at the social contexts that surrounded their understandings and uses of reading and writing, the cognitive processes that the readers and writers invoked in completing different kinds of tasks, and the products that were produced, including the ideas that were developed in reading and writing and the ways in which these ideas were structured in presentation or recall. The results point to new understandings about children's context for literacy and ways in which children at distinctly different phases of their schooling experiences approach reading and writing. The author contrasts ways in which children at each of the differing ages approach their reading and writing tasks, illuminating the knowledge they already have and what they have yet to learn.

Here's the question parents ask at the end of every school year: how can we help our kids prepare for the next school year while allowing them to enjoy their summer vacation? Here's the perfect answer: short lessons presented in a daily schedule for 8 weeks. The Monday-Thursday lessons cover a variety of grade-appropriate subjects; Friday's lessons are fun brain-teasing kinds of activities. Each book for grades PreK-6 includes over 300 stickers that can be used to track progress and reward good work.
